You re only as sick as your secrets, so the saying goes. The author, Leslie MacDill, calls upon first-hand knowledge and a compelling Scots-Irish ancestral history to give us Lies We Were Told recounting the exploits of Aidan MacEwan, an American in search of his lineage, who unearths dark mysteries beginning with his deceased father that stretch back over two hundred years. Deception surrounds the previously unquestioned MacEwan family history involving a half-brother he thought long dead, who is anything but, and a step-mother whose early passing was likely hastened by a broken heart. Aidan s investigation summons him to Great Britain and Northern Ireland in search of the family he never knew, where he is forced to confront his own devils and demons, in this world and beyond, aided by a Caribbean healer, her granddaughter, and a ginger-haired inamorata with probable paramilitary ties. An unquenchable thirst for knowledge has led Leslie MacDill down a spiritual path that includes esoteric Tibetan healing medicine, Zen Buddhism, advanced energy medicine and shamanism - into wildly divergent career...
